

Frostbite League – Winter Season 2011-2012

Remembrance Sunday (13.11.11) brought the first of our Winter Frostbite League shoots. Twelve Westcott Archers sorted themselves out on the line and shooting began. The morning was beautiful, with an intermittent troublesome breeze that played havoc with more than a few arrows. As usual there was plenty of good natured banter, which respectfully stopped at 11:00 for a two minutes silence to honour our fallen heroes. We even had the special sight of a spitfire flying over the field a little later.

An addition to our shooting routine was witnessed on the compound target (Mark, Fergus, Cass & Jan). You could hear the first arrow hit – thwack – followed by – thwack, rattle, sorry! Thwack, rattle, sorry! We are calling it the ‘sorry chorus’. Well if you will all put your arrows in the gold, what can you expect ☺ However, I do see a pattern emerging from Frostbite rounds.... the last one of the last winter season, gave us the ‘Westcott Hula’...

Good shooting everyone, I can’t think of a nicer way to spend a Sunday morning. And thanks to Peter King for organising the leagues and thanks to those who set up the targets.

So how’d we do? Have a look:
